MONDAY, SEPT. 7, 1857.

The season has now arrived when our people can make a pretty fair estimate of the year's harvest. The New York Tribune states as the general result of its inquiries and conclusions that the growth of grass throughout the dairy regions has been luxuriant; pasturage has been abundant throughout; a very large yield of hay has been secured-not in the best order-and a full supply of fall feed is beyond contingency. There must be a full product of butter and cheese, though the numof cows was probably less last spring than hith-3. Sheep also had somewhat fallen off, so that the year's product of wool and mutton, as well as beef, can have been but an average one. Rye was a full crop. Wheat suffered from winter rains and freezing out, and considerably from the weevil or midge; but a great deal was sown, and in many portions of the West, especially in the newest settlements, the yield was abundant. The Southern crop was uniformly good; and, on the whole, we believe the surplus of this year's product will be unusually large. Potatoes have suffered considerably from rot. However, our people are so used to the rot that the yield of potatoes, though small, may be equal to an average of the last ten years.

The cane is reported as doing very well in Louisiana and Texas, and promising a sugar crop at least double that of last year. Cotton promises a fair if not a large crop, and tobacco is generally thrifty.

The prospect for Indian corn-our great national taple from Maine to Texas-remains to be considered. Next to grass, if not even before it, this is our most important product, largely supplying food for man and beast, and forming, in the shape of beef, pork, and whisky, the basis of a considerable export. In the North corn is quite luxuriant, but very late, and in danger of destruction by an early frost They need a full month of mainly dry, bright weather to carry the corn beyond the reach of danger. At present, it is green as leeks, the ears scarcely fit to be and the stalks barely done growing. A frost as early as the 20th inst. would destroy half the crop. A smart frost any time this month would do great damage; before the 15th it would be a national disaster. Should this peril be Providentially averted, we may rejoice over one of the amplest harvests that ever blessed the country.

Dr. BARCLAY'S NEW WORK ON JERUSALEM .-This great work, the fruit of prolonged and thorough investigations in the Holy City, prosecuted under auspices never before enjoyed by any investigator, is announced for publication in October next. It is beyond dispute a work of the highest merit. In addition to its vast and peculiar interest as an authentic record of the latest discoveries in Jerusalem, many of which have been made by the author himself, and are now for the first time presented to the Christian public, the volume is highly embellished with chromographic illuminations, steel engravings by the best artists, periscopic panorama of the entire circuit of the city and environs, explanatory diagrams and maps, and fine wood engravings. Nothing that could shed the faintest light upon the rare and priceless text has been omitted. It is equally exact, full, and luminous. The confident assertion of the publishers that it is "the most accurate, reliable, and interesting work on Jerusalem, Ancient Mediæwal, and Modern, ever published in this or any other country," will not be doubted for a moment by any person familiar with this department of sacred literature. It is destined to produce a profound impres sion on the religious world. Price $3 50. Morocco, full gilt, $5. Persons wishing it should send on their orders promptly to James Challen & Sons, Bulletin Building, Philadelphia.

Within the past three months 8,600,000 new centile we been issued from the mint at Philadel-phia weighing forty-three tons.

The first new sugar of the season was received at New Orleans Monday, August 31st.

RIVER AND STEAMBOAT MATTERS.

The river is falling. Last evening there were 41/2 feet water in the canal. The Southerner, from Memphis, reports 6 feet water on the bars below.

For New Orleans .- The splendid steamer H. D. Newcomb, Capt. Spotts, will leave for New Orleans this evening. The Newcomb's cabin and staterooms are elegantly furnished, and has every convenience to render passengers comfortable. The N. painted. Messrs. Landrum and Barclay officiate as

For Jemphis. The Southerner, in command of Capt Triplett, has re-entered the trade, and will leave for Memphis this evening. The S. and her commander have always been favorites here. Our good friend Frank Smith, formerly of the Woodford, is one of her clerks, and to him are we indebted for a memorandum and late papers.

The steamer Wm. Dickson, Capt. Baugh, will positively leave for the Tennessee river to-day.

The Statesman is the packet for Henderson to-day. Mr. Joe. Sargeant, of the Time, has our thanks for a copy of the manifest, and also Mr. Wells of the Emma Dean. The Moses McLellan is the mailboat for Cincin-

SIXTH ANNUAL CATALOGUE OF THE HENRY FE-TALE COLLEGE.—This extremely tasteful and elegant publication has just been laid on our table. Like its predecessors, it affords the most ample and gratifying proof of the success of the excellent institution whose character and present condition it exhibits. It is a worthy memorial of the high prosperity and advancement of one of the first Female Seminaries in the West. The patrons and friends of the Henry Female College could not possibly desire a more charming token of the welfare of that sterling institution. In addition to the usual exposition of academic affairs, it contains a very graceful poem on "Female Education," by Miss M. A. Rice, a teacher in the College, and the earnest, profound, and beautiful address on "The Bible in Schools and as an Instructor of Humanity," delivered by Dr. T. S. Bell before the young ladies of the graduating class at the last commence ment. We have heretofore expressed our high sense of the merits of this production, having enjoyed the pleasure of hearing it. We need only say here that a careful perusal has even deepened the admiration with which we listened to it. Our gifted friend Saxe, who figured with immense eclat at the commencement, is, from certain obvious considerations of literary commerce, absent from the Catalogue, but, in the mind of every one who participated in that famous occasion, he will be all the more vividly present for this. His statue is not among the Cæsars, but his image is more durably engraven elsewhere. Copies of the Catalogue may be had by applying to the principal, Rev. S. S.

It will be seen from an advertisement in another column that the Henry Female College opened on Monday, the 7th instant. We are assured that the coming Academic year promises to be one of the most flourishing that the institution has known.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Courier and Enquirer says that the monetary pressure produces its natural effect of reducing importations and diminishing the revenue. The receipts now average but a million and a quarter a week, which is equal to but little over $60,000,000 per annum. The substitution of coin for paper money in the financial transactions of the Government has not only a tendency to sharpen the severialso to shorten their duration. The beginning and progress of commercial retrenchment are indicated this new bed in every town in the country. with considerable accuracy by the condition of the Treasury, which is now plethoric, but is suffering gentle and moderate depletion.

The officer in charge of the dead-letter office says that there has been "a very large increase of dead letters" since the law of compulsory pre-payment went into operation. The 'money letters' in the dead-letter office the last quarter of 1854, numbered two thousand two hundred and seventy-eight, and in the quarter ending October 1, 1854-the first quarter of compulsory pre-payment, and the last for which we have a report-they numbered three thousand and fifteen; and the increase of all dead letters was in the same proportion.

DEBUT OF MISS MAY .- Miss Juliana May will felony case. make her first appearance in America on Tuesday night, the 15th of September, at Niblo's Saloon, New York, in a grand concert. Miss May is now stopping at the New York hotel with her mother and sister, who have accompanied her in her six years' travels in Europe. She is a fine looking woman, highly connected, and has sung with success th prima donna parts in the operas of "Somnambula" and "Rigoletto."

PAY YOUR TAXES .- One of the first and most important duties of a good citizen is the regular and prompt payment of his taxes. The wheels of government must be lubricated. Capt. Megowan, our worthy Sheriff, insists that his friends-the entire people of the county-owe it to their own reputation, and to the good of the Commonwealth, to come forward immediately and settle their State taxes. Let not this injunction be disobeyed.

ELOPEMENT FROM SARATOGA .- A young Miss of fifteen summers, named White, has eloped from Saratoga Springs with John Travis, a celebrated pistol-shooter and sporting man. They have been traced to New York city, where, it is supposed, they left for the West. Travis has been guilty of the like offense once before, and has come near losing Lost Articles .- A large number of articles, parasols, umbrellas, scarfs, &c., were lost at the Fair Grounds. They have been placed at the Secretary's office in the Merchants' Exchange building, where the owners can find them.

THE MASONIC TEMPLE.—On entering the hall from the grand entrance on Jefferson street, the beholder is struck with astonishment at the magic effect produced by the blaze of light from a hundred poor health for the past year or two, from enof jets and the grandeur and magnificence of the largement of the spleen, as was supposed, but really various tents erected by the skill of the archite cand from an internal cancer, and his decease was not althe exquisite taste of the fair ones who have entered heart and soul in this benevolent enterprise of providing for the widow and the or poan. At the extreme end of this magnificent, nall is placed the Knight has undergone thorough repair, and been newly Templars' tent, with its starry decked canopy, surmounted by the banners of the Order, gracefully festooned with laurel and evergreen. The interior of the tent is most elaborately and elegantly decorated. In the center is erected one of the most chaste and beautiful temples, in imitation of the Eastern architecture, we ever beheld. The tables are well supplied with tasteful ornaments, &c., and are presided over by Mrs. Dr. Dudley and Mrs. Slaughter. On the left of the Templars' tent is the Louisville Council, with the brilliant and gay embellishments so characteristic of the order of Royal and Select Masters. The Ark of the Covenant is suspended from its dome, with other decorations, producing a most decided impression upon the initiated, and is presided over by Mrs. Hilman. Directly opposite to the Council is erected a stand representing the Royal Arch Chapter. The arch surmounting it embraces the "Key Stone," so well known to those who have been exalted to the title of Royal Arch Masons. The cabilistic letters of which have been translated by our old ebony friend Charley, who seems to be a fixture at this fair, as meaning "He that will smoke Spanish tobacco knows something." Whether this is a true interpretation of its meaning or not we leave to those who know better than ourselves to decide. The Royal Arch tables are plentifully provided with everything to please the fancy, and is in charge of Mrs. Hernden and Mrs. Down-

THE MECHANICS' INSTITUTE EXHIBITION.—There is no diminution in the attendance upon this interesting exhibition. Every night the hall is thronged with the beauty and fashion and honest-hearted workmen of the city. The articles are increasing in number, and the interest of the fair is being con. tinually hightened.

Among the many objects of taste we notice especially worthy of commendation several potichomanice vases made by Miss Buchanan, an secomplished young lady of this city. They display great skill, and are beautiful specimens of a new and attractive art.

Miss Ella Fuller exhibits several remarkable bcquets of wax flowers. They are perfect in design and execution-the coloring is faultless, and nature is imitated with remarkable precision.

Several fine portraits, the property of Blanton Duncan, Esq., have been placed on exhibition. They were painted to or ler in Italy by Powers, of New Orleans. The heads of Joel T. Hart, the Kentucky Sculptor, and Hiram Powers are characteristically

The exhibition is to be continued during the week and will not close for some ten days.

Howe's PATENT ELLIPTIC SPRING BED-EXhibited at the National Fair just closed, and which took the premium over all competitors, attracted unusual attention, and received the approval of every person who examined it. Some of our hotel keepers and steamboat proprietors gave it a thorough scrutiny, and pronounced it just the article for their use. We predict that not only will this invaluable invention come into universal use in our hotels and upon our steamboats, but every family will adopt it as the most comfortable, durable, and economical spring in existence. Messrs. Gray & Co., of Clevety of crises and panics like that now prevailing, but land, O., are the proprietors, and we understand it is their purpose to establish agencies for the sale of

It will also be seen that Howe's Elliptic Adjustable Invalid Bed, exhibited by the same parties, received a special commendation from the Society as an invaluable accompaniment to the sick room. These springs may be obtained in this city of A. H. Wing, upholsterer, Main street, below Seventh.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE .- Yesterday afternoon officer Tiller arrested a man rejoicing in some four or five different names-Chas. Henkins, Chas. Smith, Foster, and Ford. He is supposed to have escaped from prison in St. Louis. Officer T. found the scamp in a house of ill-fame up town, and chased him several squares.

Thos. Seymour and Frank Altillo were arrested by officer Ben. Rust for running off a witness in a Thos. Dorsey, for passing a counterfeit $10 bill, was taken up by officer Mordecai Howard.

James Johnson was lodged in jail for having stolen a lot of lambs from Mr. Arteburn, of the county. They had been sold to Mr. Louis Rehm.

BRUTAL AND FATAL OUTRAGE .- A most melancholy tragedy occurred on Tuesday last, in Philips county, Arkansas, not far from Helena. Mrs. Keys, the wife of a highly respectable and worthy planter, was stabbed, and, it is believed, mortally wounded, by her step son-in-law, whose name is Norwood. It seems that the overseer of Keys had been badly stabbed by one of the negroes, and was lying very low from the effects of his wounds. Norwood was engaged with him in conversation on the subject of the stabbing, when Mrs. Keys took sides with the overseer. Some harsh words passed between her and Norwood, when he drew his knife and killed

THE NATIONAL PREMIUMS .- The list of premiums awarded at the National Fair, as published yesterday, was in some respects incorrect. We shall publish in the morning authorized and official corrections, with a number of additions.

THE FISHERIES.—The mackerel, cod, and salmon fisheries are reported by a correspondent of the Bos ton Traveler to be below half the usual yiel l up to this time.

The hog cholera is prevailing with great fatal ity in Henderson county.

DEATH OF HON. GEO. G. DUNN .- The Hon. Geo. G. Dunr. died at his residence in Bedford (Ind.) on Frid g night last, at 10 o'clock. Mr. D. has been together unexpected. Mr. D. twice represented his District in Congress, and had filled other important stations. He was a man of distinguished ability, and his death will be learned with regret by the whole country.

SUPERIOR OLD BOURBON.—The felicitous allusion in Major Ben. Perley Poore's banquet speech to our State beverage-the genuine wine of Kentuckywas intended, we have no doubt, for that superior oily liquid, the "Bourbon" of Messrs. Smith, Guthrie, & Co., Main street. These hospitable gentlemen are extensive dealers in the genuine article, and their brands may be depended upon for purity.

DEPRESSION OF MANUFACTURING STOCKS.—The Boston Advertiser states that the only manufacturing stocks which now sell above par, of the regular 43 called at the Brokers' Board, are the Merrimack 1050, Otis 1030, Lowell Bleachery 235 for 200 par, Pepperell 520 for 500, Boston Gas Light 650, exdividend, for 500, and Hamilton Woolen about 110 for 100 par value.

DEATH OF AN EMINENT PHYSICIAN.-Dr. Marshall Hall, F. R. S., the well known English physician, died at Brighton on the 11th of August. The deceased was one of the most eminent members of the medical profession, widely known as a lecturer, author, and gentleman of high scientific attainments. Dr. Hall spent several days in this city a few years

FATAL ACCIDENT .- A young man named George Laffert, an employee of the Covington and Lexington Railroad, while turning a brake the other day, was thrown off the cars and under their wheels and immediately killed.

Mr. Wm. M. Ferguson, of Nashville, a highly respected gentleman, committed suicide at Nashville last week by shooting himself through the head, No cause was assigned for the act. He was a native of Lynchburg, Va.

Mr. Murray, the great potato dealer of New Orleans, has purchased within the last week seven crops of potatoes, amounting to over 3,000 bbls, at $1 to $1 10, bbls included, part delivered here and part on the spot.

REPORTS OF THE NAVAL COURTS OF INQUIRY .-The New York Times has a just and well considered article upon this subject, from which we make the annexed extract. Beyond all doubt, it is scandalously unjust and cruel that the President should withhold, month after month, his decision upon the action of the Naval Courts in the cases of the naval officers who were retired by the so-called Efficiency Board of 1855:

Board of 1855:

Reports of the Naval Courts of Inquiry—Necessity of Immediate Action Thereon.—Some six months have elapsed since the Naval Courts commenced the revision of the acts of the Efficiency Board of 1855, and the cases of about fifty officers have been carefully investigated and decisions rendered. Whether the decisions of these courts be favorable or adverse to the applicants, it appears reasonable and just that they be promulgated at the earliest possible moment, and we doubt not that the President will give attention to the matter as soon as he is relieved from the pressure of more urgent State affairs. The authority resting with him will assuredly not be withheld to the injury of those who have suffered injustice, for the inference is fair that some have been unjustly dealt with.

From our acquaintance with the personnel of the the injury of those who have suffered injustice, for the inference is fair that some have been unjustly dealt with.

From our acquaintance with the personnel of the navy, we know that with few exceptions the officers whose cases have been investigated are in the prime of life, and we also know that many of them have families dependent upon their exertions for support, and it is impossible for them to engage in any permanent business so long as it is an unsettled point whether they are to be retained in the active service of the navy. To keep this knowledge from them is not only highly injurious to those who are suffering from the errors which have been committed by the Efficiency Board, but it falls with a cruel hardship upon those furloughed and dropped officers, if there be any, who are not to be restored by the courts of inquiry. We can, therefore, after mature reflection, see no reason why the decision of the courts should be any longer kept secret. Those who may have passed triumphantly through the ordeal might afford to wait for the confirmation of the Senate; but to those who have not, it is an aggravation of their position to have their time and energies wasted in waiting for the meeting of Congress, which cannot possibly be of any benefit to them.

To take another view of the subject: Life is short and uncertain, and this uncertainty is a strong argument in favor of an early relief to the injured, not one of whom should be exposed to the chances of sinking into the grave in ignorance of the decree of the court which has wiped away the stain from his professional reputation. How greatly must the pangs of the sufferer be increased who, in his last moments, is made to feel that he is a victim of gross injustice; and, on the other hand, how sweet to him must be the tidings that relieve his mind of any further anxiety for his professional honor, which, to such men, is dearer than life itself, and constitutes the only heritage of their children!

In section first of the act of Congress which authorized the revision of the proceedings of the Efficiency Board, we have the following clause: "And in the case of a retired officer, the finding of the court, when approved by the President, shall be conclusive." It is evident, then, that the intention of Congress was that the President should decide the fate of the retired officer without waiting for the meeting of Congress. meeting of Congress.

might have been expected, the excitement caused by the announcement of the arrest of Mr John B. Robertson, yesterday, was most intense and wide-spread. Of course public sentiment is divided, and the opinions expressed are almost as numerous and varied as the number and characters of the who utter them. As a general rule we find that those who are best acquainted with the accused; those whose intimacy with him has been of the closest sort, both in a social and a business sense, closest sort, both in a social and a business sense, are incredulous with regard to this charge; while the high reputation which Mr. Robertson has always maintained as a citizen, as a business man, and in all the relations of social and private life goes far to check that tendency which is always observable in the public generally to pre-judge such cases to the detriment of the accused.

The parties immediately interested in it, his wife and her brothers, one of whom was in the city yes-terday, cout the whole affair as a conspiracy. It must have been highly dramatic when Mr. R., at-tended by the Chief of Police, entered the presence of his wife and informed her that this was the Chief. and he (Mr. Robertson) was under arrest, and for a conspiracy to take her life. No wonder she laughed the assertion to scorn, and when assured that the charge was even so, that she burst into passionate grief, and asserted her life-long confidence in her husband's integrity.

(From the Rochester Democrat )

[From the Rochester Democrat.]

Months ago, insinuations were thrown out, on the authority of Dr. Biegler, now in the Auburn prison, of the complicity of a prominent clizen in the affair of the unfortunate girl Emelie Murr, and the suggestion was made that the charge should be made upon Mr. Robertson. Probably all who heard the rumor believed it unfounded, and it was passed by without attention. The recent arrest of Mr. R. revived this calumny, if such it be, and brought out others which will find wing fast enough without the aid of the press. The name of the elder Dr. Biegaid of the press. The name of the elder Dr. Bieg-ler is in some degree connected with the affair, al-though it is charged that the negotiations for the administration of poison were made with the son. It is understood that the prosecution feel entirely confident that the evidence in the case is abundant-ly strong, and that under the present exists of this connient that the evidence in the case is abundantly strong, and that under the present state of things conviction will be the result. It is said witnesses have been stationed so as to hear and see what took place between Mr. Robertson and young Dr. Beigler, and that they will fully confirm the charge.

One of these witnesses is Mr. Oviatt, the chief of police. The others are not known to us. We express no opinion as to the truth of all this, but incline to be skeptical until something more tangible is spread before the public. is spread before the public.

It is proper to say that the Dr. Bie-ler in the case is the young man who has successed to the practice of his father.

Tragedy at North Adams. The North Adams (Mass.) Transcript gives the particulars of a bloody tragedy in that town on Weinesday last. Nathan Scott stabbed his wife, also his wifes mother, and cut his own throat. The last expected to be independent.

MONDAY EVENING, SEPT. 7, 1857.

YELLOW FEVER ON THE CALIFORNIA STEAMER The steamer Illinois, which arrived at New York last week with 600 California passengers, was detained at quarantine on account of sickness on board. Some eighteen sick persons were landed from her, a portion of them having been sick since they left Aspinwall, and others being attacked since the steamer sailed from Havana, where she put in after her unfortunate grounding upon the Colorado reef. The trials incident to a long passage and the dangers they have passed through, it is presumed, have had their influence in producing this sickness among her crovded passengers. Some of these cases are of a doubtful nature; others present some resemblance to yellow fever, and a man and woman from among the number have died. Under these circumstances it was deemed prudent to detain the vessel, and also the passengers, until further time should develop their true condition as to infectious diseases.

The steerage passengers were landed and placed in a vacant hospital. The cabin passengers were also well provided for. The California Steamship Company chartered the North River steamer Oregon and had her towed to quarantine. The cabin passengers were transferred to the spacious staterooms and salcons of this steamer, which has been made fast to the Government storehouse dock. Here they will have clean and comfortable bedding, be fed, and cared for at the expense of the company until the health officer shall permit them to depart to their anxious friends. This proceeding on the part of the steamboat company, considering that their contract is fulfilled when they have reached the port of New York, is most creditable. The extra expense, to say nothing of the detention of the steamer, will be nearly a thousand dollars per day.

The Illinois is the steamer which is to sail from New York for Aspinwall on the 20th with the California passengers and mails.

INDIA RUBBER LEGS .- In Providence, R. I., last Friday night, a lad, seventeen years of age, named Allen Campbell, employed as clerk in a jewelry establishment, and boarding in a five story house on the corner of Westminster and Walker streets, took out the window of his attic chamber, which fronts on the back yard, and, in consequence of the heat, went out upon the roof to sit down, and have a smoke. While thus enjoying his otium cum dignitate in that lofty position, he suddenly found himself sliding along the steep roof. Despairingly he grasped at the shingles and waterspouts as he fell, to save himself, but in vain, and down he went to the ground, alighting upon his feet on the solid earth, and making an impression with his heels several inches deep. He was so stunned by the fall as to be unable to help himself, and lay groaning for fifteen minutes, but being finally discovered and taken into the house, it was found upon examination that he had no bones broken. By an application of restoratives he is enabled to turn over in bed, and is fast recovering. That lad is not likely to be killed by a

GEN. BARNARD AND SIR HENRY LAWRENCE, The Vanderbilt at New York brings intelligence of the death of two more of the field officers in the Indian army-Gen. Barnard and Si. Henry Lawrence. By the death of these able military leaders just at this time in India, England sustains a heavy loss. We believe it was admitted on all hands that Gen. Barnard was doing as well before Delhi as any man could do with his means. Sir Henry Lawrence was commanding at Lucknow, the capital of Oude, where, says one of the last reports, he was "grimly busy in hanging the mutineers, with loaded fieldpieces and lighted port-fires on either side of the scaffold." In our last files of English papers was a letter from a gentleman in Calcutta to the London Times, saying that Sir Henry Lawrence was the ablest British mind in India, and that he ought instantly to be raised to the Governor-Generalship, as combining native talent, intrepidity, and knowledge of the country in a higher degree than any other

An interesting report has been received by the War Department from Mr. Bates, Superintendent of the wagon road expedition from Fort Defiance. The camel experiment is pronounced successful, These animals carried seven hundred pounds burden, principally provender for mules, and were much less jaded than the mules. They eat but little except bushes, preferring them to grass. Mr. B. conceives it easier to manage a train of twenty camels than one of five mules. Their temper, tractability, capacity for bearing burdens, and going without water, while they live on food upon which other animals would starve, render them valuable for transportation on the prairies. Every unshed animal reached El Paso lame but the camels, not one of which even exhibited fatigue.

PRISON STATISTICS.—The prison statistics gathered by Rev. Charles Spear are said to show that the average number of prisoners in the prisons of the United States is 50,000, and that 30,000 are discharged annually. In England the average is set down at 30,000 in the prisons, of whom 7,000 are juvenile delinquents. In France the whole number of prisoners is about the same as in the United States, 10,000 of whom are juvenile delinquents, many of them acquitted and yet detained, as no one will own

The Palestine (Texas) Advocate says: On the 15th inst., about nine miles northwest of this place, Mr. Archibald Briggs killed a Mr. Brown. The circumstances were about as follows: Brown induced the wife of Briggs to forsake her husband and live with him. This arrangement was made with the consent of all concerned, and the parties left. After the expiration of two or three days, Brown visited Briggs and informed him that "he could take his wife back, as he was tired of his bargain," or words to that effect. This appears to have been a little too much for the sensitive nature of Briggs, and we are told that he seized his shot-gun, remarking, "Brown, you have had your fun, now I'll have mine," took deliberate aim at him and fired, killing him almost instantly.

A claimant for a bounty-land warrant writes the rollowing letter to a bureau of the Government:

the following letter to a bureau of the Government:

To furnish more additional evidence in my claim for bounty land would subject me to a pilgrimage of 200 or 300 miles to scare up survivors in the same service, search official papers, and disturb the equilibrium of dignified and sage officials; things forbidden both by my purse and inclinations. I was verdant enough to suppose that what Uncle Sam said, he also designed to fulfil. But perhaps it is ascertained to be bad policy to bestow too much of his public domain on those willing to fight his battles, and experience has taught him to economise a little more and deal out his lands to unprincipled railroad monopolies and ambitious foreign adventurers.

MISERABLE CONDITION OF MEN AND MATTERS IN THE GADSDEN PURCHASE.—A correspondent of the California Chronicle, writing from Calabazas, gives a lamentable picture of the present condition of things in the Gadsden Purchase. He says there is absolutely nothing to go there, either for the mechanic, the farmer, the laborer, or even the small trader, especially now when all communication with the Sonorians has been broken off, on account of the atrocities and lawless acts on both sides of the chase as follows:

One hundred Americans and Europeans, 300 United States troops, 500 of Mexican origin, 60 tame Apaches, 5,000 Pimos, Papagos, and Maricopas, and perhaps 3,000 cut-throat Apaches—in all 8,000; but in reality only 600 can be called the stationary and civilized part of the community, and perhaps 150 of these only can read and write.

Immigration has done the country no good; visitors from both East and West pass on, and leave for more promising settlements. The land which may be cultivated is very limited, and at best the water necessary for irrigation is too scanty. Farming is conducted on a very small scale, and then there is a fight for the water, which the strongest gets, leaving the crops of the weaker party to dry up and be lost. But it seems the same rule prevails over all the country; the revolver bears supreme sway. the country; the revolver bears supreme sway. Tueson is said to be the only place where t shadow of law exists.

There was a great deal of talk a few years ago of the mineral wealth of this region; and it will be recollected that then many companies of adventurers started from California to push and win for-rers started from Camorina to pass and will fortune in the supposed richer mines of the Purchase. Here is what is said on that subject:

Placer mining is rather, if possible, on a lower level yet than farming, as its two principal elements are wanting, viz: gold and water to wash. It is true there are not ten miles without gold all over the country, but it is mixed with too much dirt to make country, but it is mixed with too much dirt to make its extraction profitable. The idea of finding a second California is childish. The unexplored territoond California is childish. The unexplored territory is not so extensive as is generally believed. A few good gulches may possibly be found with gold and water in the Apacheria, but it will cost sweat and blood to work them. Everything requisite will have to be transported from three hundred to thousands of miles over deserts and wastes. There being no population, no farming, no placer mining, there will be none or but little commerce, and mechanical labor will be a drug. The development of the country depends solely on mining comment of the country depends solely on mining com-panies. The hidden treasures of the deep are its only resources. When they shall be brought to daylight, then the mechanic can come here for employnent, but not till then.

I hope this will meet the eye of those who don't seem to know what a fine country California is; but if they still be grumbling and dissatified, let them come out and look for themselves, spend their dimes, but by all means save enough to get back home—get back to a Christian country.

The fact is, remarks our writer, the whole country west of the Rocky Mountains and east of the Sierra Nevada is one vast waste; a desert, traversed by thousands of volcanic mountains, amongst which a very few little bits of valleys lie, which, but the contrast they few mith these rocky write. by the contrast they form with those rocky, unfinished hills, are imagined a paradise by the weary traveler or the wretched inhabitants. However, in social countries they would be styled deserts. Generally, the inhabitants are people dissatisfied with civilization, men who are afraid of competition in work and industry, and who put too high a price on themselves and their labor. Many of them would rather live in misery with a squaw or a greaserita, than brave the nevel-seasing energy of their coun-

FROM WASHINGTON. WASHINGTON, Friday, Sept. 4.

The main portion of the party which goes out under command of Lieut. Ives, for the exploration of the Rio Colorado, will start in the Star of the West to-morrow, en route for California. It is the intention of Lieut. Ives to proceed immediately to the Gulf of California, from San Francisco, in a sailing vessel, taking with him the materials of a small vessel, taking with him the materials of a small steamer. On reaching the mouth of the Colorado, this steamer will be put together, when the party will forthwith commence the ascent of the river. This expedition of Lieut. Ives, It is believed, will eventually prove to have been one of the most important enterprises of the kind of any now in progress: whether considered simply with reference to its anticipated scientific results, or more generally to the future destiny of the vast region which it is contemplated thus to throw open to the march of civilization. civilization.

The Colorado is the largest river save one of any west of the Rocky Mountains. The lower portions of the valley at points where it has been crossed by exploring parties, has been found to possess a soil of unsurpassed richness, and the region through which it flows is believed to possess mineral resources of the most valuable kinds. Trappers tell extravagant stories of the sublimity of the scenery on the highor gorges, through which the river passes. The new Territory of Arizona which borders the lower portion is being fast filled up by emigrants.

From Salt Lake, too, the Mormons are pushing their settlements toward this valley, and are now within $25 miles of its most vastive bond. It is within 25 miles of its most western bend. It is thought possible that Lieut. Ives may find the river navigable for his small steamer, as high up as the 37th parallel of latitude, which will bring him to a point at no great distance from the Salt Lake region, and solve the problem of a short and direct water communication between that territory and the Pa Bailing against Justice.—It has long been a subject of complaint that offenders against the laws are acreened from the punishment they deserve through the intervention of individuals who are unscrupulous in entering bail to get the accused beyond the reach of the courts, or through what is called "straw bail," which represents nothing of which the law could take hold. We have repeatedly seen men, guilty of serious crimes, escape justice through these agencies. Not only do certain men make a trade of "going bail," but others who, ostensibly, are respectable and of some estimation in society, are in the habit of entering bail for scamps of the darkest dye, because they have an arrangement of mutual profit or a prospective gain. Recent proceedings before one of our courts have brought this disgraceful business more prominently before the public.—A man who has been twice charged with the commission of gravest offenses—at one time corrupting the ballot-box and attempting to destroy the free expression of public opinion, which is a great safeguard to our liberties—and, again, forging tavern licenses, to increase the number of establishments for the sale of liquor, already too numerous, and authorising the trade of grog-shops, which had no legal title to a license, has been liberated by the interference of one who has a reputation of being an influential and respectable member of the community. Such conduct is only calculated to draw suspicion upon both parties to the transaction, and the man who enters the bail for a scoundrel must not complain if the public generally confound his character with that of the accused. plain if the public generation with that of the accused.

Horses.-The correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, who attended the National fair here last week, says in one of his letters:

Before dismissing this subject of horses, let Before dismissing this subject of horses, let me state an interesting fact which I learned from Mr. T. H. Clav in reference to the bones of horses. A neighbor of his, a breeder of horses, lost eight colts one season, four of them thorough-breds and four of them common scrub stock. He amputated the legs of all of them, and boiled off the flesh, cleaning the bones thoroughly, to learn, by examination, what difference, in respect of bone, there was between pure-blsoded horses and common ores. On taking the bones of the thoroughbreds, and, holding them up to the light, he noticed that they were almost transparent, as much so as white horn. He tried the same experiment with the bones of the inferior stock. They were opaque, and transmitted light no stock. They were opaque, and transmitted light no more than buffalo horn. He then tested the bones by weight and found the thoroughbred by far the rier, showing their superior substance and solidi-They were hard and dense as ivory.

THE DIGGER INDIANS.—The Sacramento Bee has learned from a present resident of Sacramento, who has recently returned from a hunting trip in Humboldt county, of some outrages committed upon the Indians of that region which ought to be made public. It appears that the Bee's informant went up to a valley about thirty miles south of the mouth of Eel river, which empties into the Pacific, and, finding plenty of elk deer, and bear, he temporarily ing plenty of elk, deer, and bear, he temporarily located. The region is filled at this season with American hunters.

American hunters.

There is but one permanent white resident in the valley, a man who went there from Nevada county with a Digger squaw for his wife, accompanied by the Indians of the rancheria from which he took her. He is living upon a ranch, the limits of which have not yet been surveyed, and which is covered by a large number of cattle brought there and placed the property of upon it, from time to time, by himself. The increase upon it, from time to time, by minestr. The increase of his stock promises to be rapid; in fact, the man is already a wealthy individual, though occupying so isolated and semi-savage a condition.

Losing some of his cattle recently, which the informant save he is certain were in some instances.

formant says he is certain were in some instances killed, and in others driven off, by the hunters, he attributed the depredations to the Indians belon to that region, and requested the hunters to down every Indian (except those he brought with him from Nevada county) that they should come across. Many of the hunters were more than ready to act upon the suggestion, for it gave them a still better chance for carrying on a traffic in which they had previously been engaged, to-wit: kidnapping Digger children and selling them in different parts of the country. A great wany Indians have thus of the country. A great many Indians have thus been shot down in cold blood by these white savages, and the inhuman practice of kidnapping is now go-and the inhuman practice of kidnapping is now going on with the steadiness of a regular system.

There is no remedy, adds the Bee, for these impositions upon the unfortunate Diggers but the one now at work, and that is the placing them, as fast as it can be done, upon the reservations for their reception. They are not always inclined, however, to go upon the reservations. Many of the tribes straggle off from the main body of their people and hide themselves in the mountains, in order to escape that evil fate, as they think it. By such conduct, they place themselves completely in the power of the hundreds of lawless white men who pitch their camps from place to place through the mountains camps from place to place through the mountains and make their money partly by hunting, partly by stealing cattle and laying it to the Indians, and partly by the system of kidnapping above alluded to.

This latter practice is common in various parts of the country. The fact, however, that such flagrant impositions are committed, should cause renewed.

impositions are committed, should cause renewed impositions are committed, should cause renewed energy and exertion in this regard by those whose business it is especially to attend to it. There is no plea for the poor Digger but that of humanity. He has none of the romance which gathers around the nobler savage of the western prairies—he cannot defend himself or his rights, and a prayer for mercy is his only arounder against cruelty, and conversion. his only argument against cruelty and oppres

THE TURN OF LIFE .- Between the years of 40 and 60, a man who has properly regulated himself may be considered in the prime of life. His ma-tured strength of constitution renders him almost impervious to the attacks of disease, and experience has given soundness to his judgment. His mind is resolute, firm, and equal; all his functions are in the highest order; he assumes mastery over business; builds up a competence on the foundation he has formed in early manhood, and passes through a period of life attended by many gratifications. Having gone a year or two past 60, he arrives at a standstill. But athwart this is a viaduct, called the "Turn of Life," which, if crossed in safety, leads to the valley of "old age," round which the river winds, and then beyond without a boat or causeway to effect its passage. The bridge is, however, constructed of fragile materials, and it depends upon how it is trodden, whether it bend or break. Gout, apoplexy, are also in the vicinity to waylay the traveler, and thrust him from the pass; but let him gird up his loins and provide himself with a fitter formed in early manhood, and passes through a pegird up his loins and provide himself with a fitter staff, and he may trudge in safety, with perfect com-posure. To quit metaphor, "The Turn of Life" is a turn either into a prolonged walk, or into the grave. The system and powers, having reached their utmost expansion now begin to either close like flowers at sunset or break down at once. One injudicious stimulant, a single fatal excitement supply of props, and the withdrawal of all that tends to force a plant, will sustain it in beauty and vigor until night has entirely set in.

IN TOWN WITH A POCKET FULL OF ROCKS .- A Tennessee planter lately visited New Orleans, and stopped at the St. Charles Hotel, and in the course of a week created a prodigious sensation. He was a stout, plain looking old fellow, and on the trip down from Memphis contrived to get very drunk, so that from the time he landed in the city until he left, he carried on like a crazy man, paying fifty or a hundred times the value of every thing he bought. He gave a colored barber $20 for shaving him, and refused to take any change; paid half a dollar for a glass of liquor, declined the change, and gave the barkeeper $20 additional as a free gift. On the latter being rejected, the planter crumpled up the bill. Tennessee planter lately visited New Orleans, and ter being rejected, the planter crumpled up the bill, threw it behind the counter, and walked off in a rage. The planter had all his pockets stuffed with bank notes of the denominations of hundreds, fifties, and twenties, which hat threw away recklessly. If he ran against a person he dashed a handfull of bills in ran against a person he dashed a handfull of bills in his face. Not satisfied with this, he afterwards paraded about with a linen bag so full of silver that it bent him down to carry it. Wherever he had a chance, he paid for drinks, &c., with a handfull of half dollars. After a three days' tour of this description, he packed up and traveled back to Tennessee, where he belonged. He is said to be quite wealthy. The suckers about town are believed to have reaped a grand harvest out of this poor inebriate's folly.—Phila. North Amer.

A Fine Operation in Dentistry.—Dr. J. J. Wetherbee, dentist, of No. 10 Tremont Row, has introduced into his practice a very useful and elegant operation, quite worthy of public attention. It consists of the restoration of partially decayed teeth by crystal gold welded on. The original form of the tooth is fully restored, and for all practical purposes it is as good as new. We have seen two front teeth one-third gone by decay fully brought back in this way to their original shape, strength, and service. Wherever there is a solid and sound foundation, no matter how much of the upper portion of the tooth is gone, this operation can be successfully performed. It is a curious illustration of the law of compensations, that, while our people have the poorest teeth of any nation under the sun, we have also the best dentistry. Indeed the latter art is essentially American.—Boston Traveller.

THE ISLAND IN DANGER .- This favorite and only retreat of the citizens of Toronto, from the busy cares of every day life, is fast disappearing. Places which a year ago were fifty feet in width, now measure hardly half as much. If some means are not taken, and that speedily, to prevent its washing away, at the present rate, there will soon be little of the is-land left.

Quin's Hotel is also in an alarming state. The whole rear wall of the building has been knocked down, from the dashing of the waves against it, and at this moment (Saturday night) the water is half way under the house. It is now in a condition which renders it a serious matter to live in it; and there is no doubt that before long it will be totally destroyed if it cannot be secured from the fury of the waves.—Toronto Globe, Aug. 24.

Dr. King's Dispensary.

Dr. A. KING, a practitioner of New York for the last thirty years, has opened a Dispensary on Market, between First and Second, Learly opposite the Graham House, Louisville, for the treatment of Private Diseases, such as Gonorrhea, Syphilis, and all diseases of the skin and other derangements growing out of neglect or imperfect cure. His long experience and success enable him to act with confidence. All those who may confide their cases to him may rest assured of having the disease effectually cured and every vestige of the difficulties perfectly eradicated from their constitutions.

STRICTUERS of old or recent date effectually cured in a few days by an operation which causes no pain. Where a stricture exists, general derangement of the whole constitution must ensue, a continuance of which will bring on a train of symptoms to be dreaded, and will undermine the constitution and cause premature old age.

SEMINAL WIAKIPSS.—Particular attention will be given to this disease and all the consequences growing out of it, brought on, in many cases, by the destructive habits of inconsiderate youth and excessive indulgence of the passions, which undermine the constitution, rendering the subject unfit for either business or society, and causing premature old age.

MONEY MATTERS .- The New York Times of Saturday

Money Matters.—The New York Times of Saturday says in its money article:

While our city banks, in the aggregate, are rapidly gaining strength, particularly in the important element of gold, and the reserve of the next week or two promises to run up three or four millions on the average of last Monday, the financial look of affairs to-day is not quite so satisfactory as yesterday. We begin to feel the rebound of our first trouble from the interior, and this in turn is affecting unfavorably the discount market, and the facilities for collection and negotiation by the merchants. A considerable amount of country bank checks have been dishonored within a day or two, principally from Buffalo and other cities in the interior of this State. The first were the checks of Oliver Lee & Co.'s Bank at Buffalo, refused by Mesers. Duncan, Sherman & Co. on Wednesday. The bank failed to-day. The circulation is less than $100,000, secured by State stocks at Albany. The Park Bank also threw out yesterday and to-day a number of their country correspondents whose accounts were overdrawn. The notes of the Danhy Bank of Vermont, were thrown out by the Metropolitan and American Exchange, on advice from Boston that its notes were refused redemption.

As intimated above, the discount market is wholly unsettled. The banks, who had their discount sessions this morning, did a liberal part by their regular customers, though the offerings were far beyond their income. The troubles have brought a good many Eastern and Western cashiers to town, some of them with their city-drawn or city-accepted paper for negotiation. The mercantile failures reported to-day are Mesers. Acker & Harris, dry goods importers, and a tobacco shipper of no large liabilities. Assistance is under-tood to have been rendered to another mercantile concern yesterday, out of which grew a rumor that the firm ha is topped payment. Exchange continues unsettled. The steamer to-morrow is the North Star for Havre. Some france were sold at 5.21%, but little or no Sterling. The ran

Mr. Whithy has of late produced a marked sensation as the literary circles of Great Britain by a series of satirical papers published in the London Times, under the nome deplume of "The Stranger in Parliament," which have gained for him the most enviable notoricty of being one of the most powerful political essayists in Europe and a satirist of great vigor and strength. This, his first complete work, is of the most brilliant character, combining a racy expose of certain literary and artistic clauses in London, together with a story and plot which for quaintness and interest has been compared to the "Christle Johnstone" and "Peg Woffington" of Charles Reade.

EVENING BULLETIN.

AN APPI & ORCHARD. As the season is approach ing who a those who design setting out an orchard se making out their lists of varieties, we purse naming some that we think best adapted for camily use and for sale:

For an orchard of one hundred trees for general purposes, the Cincinuati Horticultural Society recommends the following list:

For July and August....

July and August....

September and Oct...

Oct. and November ...

Nov. and December ...

Nov. and December ...

Nov. and December ... Oct. and November. 4 Rambo.
Nov. and December. 5 Golden Russet.
Nov. and December. 5 Newtown Spitzenberg.
Nov. and December. 20 White Bellitower.
January and February 15 Pryor's Red.
February to April. 40 Raule's Janet.
March. 5 Newton Pippin.

We do not well see how the Early Harvest could be dispensed with. If for family use only, we should take two from the White Bellflower and substitute the Early Harvest; if near a city, the number should be increased. We should take four more from the same, and, instead of them, plant two Black Annette and two American Summer Pearmain, which is the only apple a person would exchange a good peach for. They are not good growers, but the delicate texture and fine flavor of the fruit fully compensate, for this. The list still contains 14 White Bellflowers; we should reduce it to 8, by substituting two Fall Queens; then taking one from the Rambo, we should add five to the Pryor Red. The list would then stand thus:

Summer Rose.
Early Harvest.
Elack Annette.
Strawberry.
American Sum. Pearmain.20 Prior Red.
Fall Pippin.
Rambo.

5 Pall Queen.
5 Newton Spitzenburg (in some localities only.)
8 White Bellflowers,
40 Rawle's Jannete.
5 Newton Pippin. Green Russet.

In most localities in the south-west it would be best to leave out the Newton Spitzenburg, and substitute some other, in which case we should take the Wine Sap or Jonathan, or in case a sweet apple is wanted Red Winter Sweet. This list will give a good supply of apples at all seasons, and the season may be prolonged by adding 5 Little Romantte, which though by no means a fine fruit is so good a keeper that it cannot well be dispensed with.

QUICK VEGETATION OF SEED .- Many persons are prevented from growing seedling fruit by the length of time which must, under ordinary circumstances. transpire before they see the results of their care.

A Mr. Boyden, of New Jersey, has hit upon ar ingenious method to "hurry ap" the fruiting period. His plan is, in the case of strawberries or raspberries. to bruise the ripe fruit in a sheet of paper, and after drying it he exposes it to a freezing temperature by means of a freezing mixture (say a mixture of powdered ice and salt), for about half a day, and then planting them, they were found to grow off at once, as if they had passed through a winter season, and a crop of fruit was secured the following season. thus shortening by one half the usual period required to test new seedlings.

This is a very interesting experiment, and may succeed possibly as well with the seeds of larger fruits, cherries, plums, grapes, &c., for instance; if so, it will no doubt be the means of inducing many persons to bestow some attention to growing seedlings, than which there is no more interesting field of operation for the pomologist.

The seed of larger fruit may require to be exposed several times to the freezing temperature before planting, but this would be but little additional

HUNTINGTON, CARROLL COUNTY, WEST TENN., ) August 17, 1857. To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

GENTLEMEN—In reading your paper a few days ago, my attention was attracted by a letter from Mr. Metcalf, earnestly soliciting information in regard to the preservation of young fruit trees, from hares. For the benefit of that gentleman, and others wishing to grow good fruit trees, it gives me great pleasure to be able to submit for your consideration a few facts that have come under my own observation. In the fall of 1855, a friend of mine, residing in Obion county, planted out an orchard of nice young apple trees, forgetting to use any precaution against the rabbits; the consequence was, that, when the cold weather came on, nearly every tree was seriously rabbits; the consequence was, that, when the cold weather came on, nearly every tree was seriously injured by these little quadrupeds. In the fall following I set out some more trees in the same orchard, but this time we made a compound of lard and pulcertzed sulphur, and with this mixture we painted every tree, and the result was, that notwithstanding we had a very severe winter—and—in that locality the little animals were exceeding numerous—yet, in the spring, when we examined our trees, not one of them had been barked, or affected by the aforesaid nem had been barked, or affected by the aforesaid little creatures; and I may also state that the paint (or rather mixture) is still on the trees and will preserve them during the coming winter.

I am very respectfully,

DOLF SMOOT.

KENTUCKY STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY-FIRST EXHIBITION.

CLASS M-AGRICULTURAL LITERATURE. Essay under the Fifth Class, by Dr. R. J. Breckinridge to whom was awarded the first Premium-$20. On the Use and Assistance of Mechanics to Agriculture is the only pursuit followed by man whereby additional material is added to the sum which existed before. All other pursuits are designed to add new value to things which existed before. Agriculture alone adds both additional mabefore. Agriculture alone adds both additional ma-terial and new values. Every crop which the soil produces, every animal which is born, are not obly new values; they are also additional existences— things which did not exist before. But in every other industrial pursuit, no matter how immense may be the changes wrought by science or by art, or how vast may be the values created, still it is only changes which are produced, only values which have been created. Nothing has been really added to the sum of existence. It is this which distinguishes agriculture from all other industrial pursuits, and makes it the fundamental basis of all productions all wealth all increase of the sheelyte of the second continuous and wealth all increase of the sheelyte of the second continuous and wealth all increase of the sheelyte of the second continuous and wealth all increase of the sheelyte of the second continuous and wealth all increase of the sheelyte of the second continuous and wealth all increase of the sheelyte of the second continuous and wealth all increase of the sheelyte of the second continuous and wealth all increase of the sheelyte of the second continuous and the second continuou duction, all wealth, all increase of the absolute suits, and makes it he fundamental basis of all production, all wealth, all increase of the absolute sum of existences. Not even has it any power to add to the sum of the mineral kingdom; but over the animal and vegetable kingdoms its power seems to be unlimited in increasing them.

The question which the Kentucky State Agricultural Society proposes for this essay is, the use and assistance of one department, to-wit: mechanics—one of those great pursuits which create only new values upon this one single great pursuit which produces both new material and new value, to-wit: agriculture—the use and assistance, therefore, of mechanics in enabling agriculture both to produce additional material and additional values. And inasmuch as the mechanic arts can have no material influence on the production of animal life, or in adding to those qualities of animals which determine their value, in themselves considered, I shall confine what I have to say chiefly to the influence which mechanics may be made to exert in augmenting the increase and the value of the productions of the soil.

Considered in one point of view, agriculture can soil.

Considered in one point of view, agriculture cannot take more than one single step without the aid both of science and of art. Left to work merely with his hands, man could add little to the spontaneous productions of nature. Every tool he requires is an exemplification, more or less perfect, of one or the other of the mechanical powers, and every one of them is an application, more or less complete, of one or other of the other mechanical arts to agreculture. All middle-aged men in Kentucky have seen human beings do alone what they could do ten times as well with the aid of horse power—innumerable instances in which defective implements take away half the value of the labor, whether human or animal, which is employed. And the instances in which dead labor is made to supply the place of both human and brute labor, though multi-the reap-hook, the cradle, and the reaper succeed each other in our harvest fields—have seen the reythe followed by the mower in our meadows—have seen the hemp hook supplant the old method of pulling hemp, and can form some idea of what effect would be produced if we had a machine to cut seem as much better than the common hook, as the mower is better than the common seythe. Old men have seen corn pounded in a mortar for bread—have seen the hand stones follow the mortar—have seen the horse mill follow the hand stones, the water have seen corn pounded in a mortar for bread—have seen the hand stones follow the mortar—have seen the horse mill follow the hand stones, the water mill follow the horse mill, the steam mill follow the water mill. And if we will but allow ourselves to run over what our own living generation has seen, we have a clear idea of what agriculture must be even in its first civilized state with low advantages from the mechanic arts, and how immeasurably it is indebted to them, both for increased production and increased values.

is indebted to them, both for increased production and increased values.

We see, therefore, that while agriculture, in its widest sense, is the foundation of all production, yet it is dependent for its own progress and perfection upon most of the sciences and arts. Those sciences, especially which we call natural sciences, and those which we call by the special name of natural philosophy, can hardly take a step in advance without the condition of agriculture in all civilized countries feeling the beneficial effects; nor are there many arts which the ingenuity of man can organize, or his good fortune even stumble on, connected with those sciences whose range is so immense, which many arts which the ingentity of hand can organize, or his good fortune even stumble on, connected with those sciences whose range is so immense, which may not be made available to the great advantage of agriculture. These beneficent effects are produced in a two-fold manner—the one indirect, the other direct, and both ways they operate both upon production and value; one use and advantage being, however, mainly to increase production itself, while the other, hardly less important, is chiefly to increase the value of all productions. Both these aspects of the subject deserve our most serious consideration.

It is impossible to estimate the importance of the indirect aid which mechanical philosophy, in its practical application, has rendered, and is destined, in a still higher degree, to render to agriculture. The more bulky products of the earth are of comparatively small value, and even at the most reduced price have a very limited demand, when they cannot be transformed, by some manufacture of them, into a shape in which they can be transported easily, or when the means of transportation are insufficient or the cerelly. The grain crops of Ken-them, into a shape in which they can be transported easily, or when the means of transportation are insufficient or too costly. The grain crops of Kentucky, until very recently, would have been of no value beyond a very local demand, and therefore would have been very little cultivated if they could not have gone to market in the form of live stock or whisky; or while subjected, in the form of flour, to a precarious voyage in flat boats down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, and after that perhaps to a still more precarious traffic with the West India Islands. more precarious traffic with the West India Islands. At present, these crops are worth, on an average, double their former value, and are paid for in cash at our own market towns. Besides the immense at our own market towns. Besides the immense stimulus to production, the actual price is doubled, and the whole risk and delay removed. Whatever influence other causes may have had in this revolu-tion, undoubtedly it is steam applied to manufac-tures and to transportation, which has mainly effected it. Innumerable examples might be given of this indirect benefit of the mechanic arts upon of this indirect benefit of the mechanic arts upon agriculture. The most remarkable, perhaps, which has ever occurred has happened in our own times, and relates to our own country. Cotton, from being raised merely for household purposes, has become the chief article of the commerce of the world. It is a few inventions in the mechanic arts which have produced this unparalleled change. Whitney's in-vention of the cotton gin; Arkwright and Watt's vention of the cotton gin; Arkwright and Watt's inventions on machinery moved by steam; the perfection of instruments for carding, spinning, and weaving; these are the powers—mechanical, all of them—which have had the greatest share in producing results by means of which the destiny of our own country, and perhaps of the whole world, has been indirectly, but most materially affected; first through agriculture, and afterwards through every interest of man.

These immense revolutions in values are not al-

These immense revolutions in values are not al-These immense revolutions in values are not always obvious in their origin, nor in their first effects; still less are we prepared to see from the small beginnings the enormous and complicated final results. Yet they work with steady and irresistible force.—
The silent and obscure meditations of McCormick would seem to have no assignable relation to the whole grain and grass region of the earth, and the rude attempts of Watt to simplify the mode of ap-plying steam as a motive power to the machinery could have presented to him no conceivable bearing upon the question of slavery, with all its complica-tions, in this great Republic. Yet the thoughts of tions, in this great Republic. Yet the thoughts of such men, earnestly working in one direction, become at last controlling practical forces working in all directions. If they begin with agriculture, even indirectly considered, they widen until they embrace innumerable interests; and let them begin where they may, if they work across till they enter the vast domain of agricultural interests, it is then that they attain their greatest force.

If we will consider the direct influence of mechanics as applied to agriculture, the most obvious reics as applied to agriculture, the most obvious re-flection which this aspect of the subject suggests is that all the mechanical powers, in their simple and separate forms, are so many instruments provided in the nature of things, by which man is enabled to in the nature of things, by which man is enabled to increase his power over inanimate things, in a degree proportionate to his own skill. There is no shape which inanimate matter can assume, in which it is capable of resisting the power of man when aided by the mechanical powers, even separately taken, and in their simple forms. When skillfully combined, their power may be indefinitely increased, and in like degree man's power through their use. and in like degree man's power through their There is nothing in the nature of agricultural em-ployments which makes them an exception to these universal truths; on the contrary, it is of their very ployments which makes them an exception to these universal truths; on the contrary, it is of their very nature, as has been already remarked, that they cannot advance beyond the very lowest condition, except by the aid of mechanical powers. It may be added that the indefinite application of such powers, in the way of improved tools, implements, and machines, may carry, to an indefinite degree, the success of every agricultural employment. To stir the surface of the ground with a sharpened stick pulled by one man, and pushed by another, is an improvement upon seratching a hole in the ground with our fingers; but to turn the ground a foot deep with one of our best plows pulled by horses, is another condition of things altogether; and there are many conditions between these two. To peel hemp with the fingers, as is still done in many countries, far below that condition in which, thirty years ago, one hundred pounds per day was heavy work with our primeval breaks, and that is far below our present ability with improved implements and skill; far as it is below what might occur if we had as good machinery for breaking hemp as we have for grinding grain; or taking the very simplest operation, let any one observe two men shelling corn, with the ear in one hand and a burnt cob in the other, and then observe two children shelling ears with the simple machine made by combining the wheel and the inclined plane, and he will have a clear conceptien of the two conditions of man, when using little beyond his natural force, and when using even every simple mechanical contrivance.

There are three forms of toil which accurately dis-echanical contrivance.

There are three forms of toil which accurately dis-There are three forms of toil which accurately distinguish the progress of agriculture. The lowest is human toil, in which man himself, almost unaided, performs the entire work of tillage. The next above is animal toil, in which dumb beasts are subjected by man to the greater part of those labors which husbandry demands. The third and highest is dead soil, in which machinery is made to perform, to the utmost possible degree, the labor, both of man and beast. It is to set out the extreme importance of our more rapid advance into this third and highest condition that this little essay is written. We have seen the hoe banished entirely from the cultivation of corn, and the work better done, far more of it done, and far more corn raised to the acre, and more done, and far more corn raised to the acre, and more done, and far more corn raised to the acre, and more aeres cultivated to each hand under an exclusive system of horse-husbandry. We have seen the flail give place to the treading floor, and that give place to the threshing machine, man labor, beast labor, and dead labor following each other, and who can doubt that the end is incomparably better than all that went before it? The original form of mere human toil never prevailed exclusively in this country, as it has always done and still does, to such an immense extent, over the earth. Still however.

plying every year, are yet very far below what the plying every year, are yet very far below what the interests of agriculture demand.

It would appear to be wholly useless to attempt to satisfy mankind of the truth of propositions so plain and so certain, as that a laborer can do more and better work with the help of a horse, a mule, or an ox, than he can do by himself—that a machine can do more than a man and a beast united—and that a man, a beast, and a machine combined can do infinitely more than any one of them, or any two of them. But in agriculture, other things being nearly equal, the amount of production depends upon the amount of skillful labor applied. It is perfectly certain that one laborer can produce more corn from ten acres of land cultivated produce more corn from ten acres of land cultivated with his utmost skill and teil than the same laborer can produce from five hundred acres, if he were to attempt to cultivate the whole with his utmost skill and toil. If he can, by any means whatever, obtain the force which will enable him to cultivate the whole five hundred acres as he did the ten, then it is charier that his charge the state of the stat is obvious that his productive force is fifty times as great as it was before. But it is equally obvious that if, by any means, he could cultivate the ten acres lifty times as well, with the fiftieth of man labor used before, he would immensely diminish his personal toil, and immensely increase the sum of his products. But nothing can be more certain than that skilled labor is more productive than unskilled labor—dead labor cheaper than live labor. In the work of all machinery there is a certain regula ity which human labor cannot attain, so that man can do, with the help of a machine, what one man in ten thousand can do without the machine, who will be the weardath man had one man in ten thousand can do without the ir achine. And besides, this ten thousandeth man had to spend many years of his life in acquiring his rare skill, while the other nine thousand nine nundred and ninety-nine men acquired very read and then every one of them will do with his mar aine far more, and then every one of them will do with his mar aine far more, and the company of the change of the man and the company one of them will do with his mar aine far more, and the company of the change of the man and the company of the change of the one of them will do with man. Anne far more, and far better, and far cheaper work than the one man out of ten thousand can do by himself. And this great vital truth is absortately universal. It is as certain that one very cortain on man can do, with an ordinary axe, what a thousand of the ablest men in the world could not do as well, or in the same time, without some took or indext, or in the same time, without some tool equivalent to an axe, as it is that any ordinary man, with a few months' training, could do with the most perfect pieces of machinery what ten thousand of the ablest men in the world could not do at all without the machine.

could not do at all without the machine.

Everything that augments the force of man, in whatever way, elevates him that much above what he was before. Everything that increases the efficacy of toil blesses the human race in two admirable ways, for it enables man to escape, to a certain extent, from the incessant burden of toil and from the hardest parts of toil, and it increases, by just that much, the amount of available force which the human race possesses. Toil is one part of the lot of man on earth, but it is not his whole lot. Whatever mitigates the sum of the great burgen of human er mitigates the sum of the great burden of human toil alleviates the common lot of man, whatever increases the efficacy or the productiveness of toil increases the sum of the great mass of human enjoyment. And, moreover, it is in this direction chiefly, if not alone, that we are to seek for the amelioration of the physical condition of the provinced condition of the provinced condition of the great mass. ration of the physical condition of the great mass of human kind—the innumerable children of toil without rest and without adequate reward. We can not add one acre, nay, not one atom, to the sum of the earth itself. In whatever degree our race may increase, they must all exist upon such food as the present earth will afford, and the excess must peror race increases indefinitely—our earth can feed.
Our race increases indefinitely—our earth can never increase at all, and already the cry of unrequited toil—the cry of toil that does not furnish bread to eat—has sounded like a funeral knell from all the crowded marts of population for many generations.
To increase the productiveness of the earth itself is To increase the productiveness of the earth itself is therefore the grand lesson of all true humanity, as well as all true philosophy directed to the problem of human existence itself, while to increase the efficacy of human toil is the grand lesson of that same humanity and philosophy directed to the problem of the physical comforts of that existence.

I know how immense are the aids derived from other sciences and other arts in increasing the productiveness of the earth, and in augmenting the efficacy of toil. But it is not of these that this little essay treats. Its aim is to direct attention to the mechanic arts as one of the greatest and most ne-glected sources of these grand improvements. If all the rulers of all the nations of the earth were to perish in one day, enough would be found ready, eager, and competent to occupy their places, and the human race would experience no serious evil, much less any permanent loss by so vast a shock. But if the like number of individuals were to perish in a day, embracing only the first man, the highest genius in every country and in every department of science, and art, and practical skill in the matters embraced in our present meditations, the great inventors, the great discoverers, the great philosophers, the great mechanics, society would receive a shock from which it would take a century to recover, if indeed it ever recovered it at all. For how easy would it be to select from amongst the dead a hun would it be to select from amongst the dead a hun dred names of whom it might be truly said that if these men had never lived and invented and worked the present posture of the human race could never have been reached! ave been reached!

It is absurd to imagine that the mechanic arts cannot be applied to the purposes of agriculture as effectually as to the purposes of any other great material interest of man. Already many of the most beautiful and effective creations of mechanical ingenuity and skill have been brought into existence with direct reference to the interests and the staples of certiful transfer of the interests and the staples of certiful transfer of the interests and the staples of the contract of the interests and the staples of the certiful transfer of the interests and the staples of the certiful transfer of the contract transfer agriculture. Whoever, for example, will examine the machine now in common use for manufacturing the cards used in preparing wool and cotton for spinning, and then examine the machines empl in preparing these great staples themselves for the use of man, will see how little reason there is to di trust human ingenuity in any part of a subject of such vital importance. Whoever will examine a farm furnished, even with a tolerable completeness, with the implements already in the reach of every farmer in independent circumstances, will readily admit that mechanical ingenuity has already conferred on acticulture in the most direct manner, advantages that mechanical ingenuity has already conferred on agriculture, in the most direct manner, advantages of the very highest kind. It is by the liberal patronage of these inventions and discoveries, when they have real merit, that we most effectively stimulate the production of new and still better machines, applicable to other uses not yet sufficiently provided for. The farming interest in Kentucky is at present in circumstances of great prosperity, and no country in the world, and no pursuit in life, can furnish men better fitted than many of them to do all that the noble calling to which they are devoted may require. One who is proud and happy to be numbered amongst them ventures in the suggestions may require. One who is proud and happy to be numbered amongst them ventures in the suggestions herein made, rather to set forth a slight exposition of the views which we cherish as a class, than to aim at stating anything which is not well known to mul-

BANK OF KANAWHA .- Those having Kanawha money in this vicinity will be interested in the following item, taken from the Kanawha (Va.) Republican, which is published in the same place where the Bank of Kanawha is located. The Republican

The bank, up to this date (Monday night, August 31), has promptly redeemed all of its paper in specie, when presented at its counter. We hear from reliable authority that the bank will be able to meet all her liabilities, unless the Life Insurance and all her liabilities, unless the Life Instructe and Trust Company, in its dying struggles, has improperly involved it. The Bank of Kanawha is under the management of prudent, cautious, and experienced men, who have the entire confidence of this community. We are of the opinion that all alarm or panic about the ultimate solvency of the bank is altogether wrong. Virginia banks don't fail.
